An afterthought, written in a margin almost forty years ago, was the single clue to a forgotten legacy – that our grandmother’s grandfather was the last of a long line that went back to Finlaggan’s Lords of the Isles and beyond. We gathered in Glasgow in July, 2016. For the next three weeks we would go looking for Myrtha’s Scotland; staying in bed and breakfast hotels and finding the places where generations had been born, lived, and died. Our adventure would include cities with intriguing names, royal palaces, battlefields, ruined castles, abbeys, and even a lost manor house. This book is the story of our journey.
