William Coxe : Travels into Poland, Russia, Sweden and Denmark Volume 5 before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Travels into Poland, Russia, Sweden and Denmark Volume 5:

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1792 Excerpt: ... to him in the hour of his disgrace; of her unwearied attentions to soothe his disappointment, and to rouse him from his despondency; of her refusal to accept a very honourable and advantageous settlement osfered by the states of Denmark; and of her noble answer, " That "she had rather live with her husband in "banishment, than reign without him. She survived his deposition only three years, and died in the palace of Ghent, in 1526. Anne of Denmark, sister of Christian the Fourth, and queen of James the First. Several of Charles the First, one in his princely robes, when a boy about fifteen; and another by Vandyke, when he was a young man. The chapel is a very handsome apartment, but more remarkable for its costliness than for its taste. The walls are hung with the escutcheons of the knights of the Ele Mallet, Hist, des Dan. vol. ii. p. 277, 4to. phant, phant, the first order in Denmark; as those of the gallery are with the escutcheons of the knights of the order of Danebrog. The palace of Friedensberg, about four miles from Fredericsborg, is by far the most delightfully situated; it stands at a small distance from the lake of Esserom, a piece of water about fifteen miles in circumference; the ground gently sloping to its banks, and adorned with large forest trees. I scarcely ever beheld a situation more capable of improvement, and wished for a disciple of Brown to lay out the ground. But this beautiful situation is spoiled (if it can be spoiled) by cut yews, strait walks, a profusion of statues and triumphal arches, where nature and simplicity are expelled; for in those parts, on the opposite side of the lake, where nature is left to herself, nothing can exceed its beauty and picturesque scenery. The palace is a brick building stuccoed whit...
