Lindfal to HudwickfwaU The Country and the Hu Landry carried on by the Peafants Horflen Defcription of M. de Verfp Ois fine Seat at Raverfiurg An Account of his very Jpirited I mprovements. IT was the evening of the 28th of June before I arrived at Lindfal, which is a little inconfiderable village. From thence I fet out the next morning for Hudwickfwald, the diftance fixty miles, which proved a journey of two days. The night of the ift I laid at Dilfbo ;the country very wild and mountainous, like Dalecarlia, and not better cultivated :in fome of the vales are fmali villages, the inhabitants of fome of which have little farms, but I do not think are quite fo indubious in their management of them as their neighbours of Dalecarnia. Dilfbo ftands on a river near the Baltic, and has a harbour that admits (hips of two hundred tons burthen, but yet there is hardly any trade at it: now and then a vel Tel comes for a load of timber, but it is feldom.
