Middleburgh I fet out for Sluys, the 27th of June jpart of the way, I was forced to take a failing boat. There is nothing in that town, which is worth the ihorteft flay; I only dined there, and in the afternoon reached Bruges, having paf Ted through a country pretty well cultivated. I fixed my quarters by recommendation at the Half Moon, where I found extreme good accommodation, and much civility. Bruges is an antient and extenfive city, walled in, the circumference being near five miles.(Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and don't occur in the book.)About the
